ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.

The Residence of Mrs. T. C. Wolfenden Entered.

Early Sunday morning an attempt was made to enter the house of Mrs. T. C. Wolfenden, adjoining that of the Times-Register. Mrs. Wolfenden and her daughter occupied a room upstairs, while her son and a friend were sleeping downstairs. About 4 a. m. Mrs. Wolfenden awoke hearing a slight noise, and discovered that the lamp she usually keeps burning in her room had been extinguished, though the wick was even then smoking. About this time the young men were awakened downstairs and saw distinctly the shadow of a man and heard him climb the fence as he attempted to get away, not, however, before they had fired two shots at him, both of which unfortunately missed the scoundrel.

BREVITIES.

There will be a meeting Thursday at 7:30 p. m., at the Salem Female Seminary, of a number of ladies and gentlemen for the purpose of forming a musical association. The recent Schubert concert seems to have revived the interest in music, which was so strong here a year or two ago.

The plastering of all the rooms in the Baptist orphanage has been finished, and to-day the unique iron staircase, manufactured at the Camden Iron Works, will be placed in position. The superintendent informed THE TIMES reporter to-day that many of those in Salem who promised subscriptions have not yet paid up.

The furniture purchased for the Methodist Church by the ladies with the proceeds of the recent oyster supper, arrived yesterday and was placed in position. It consisted of three large and handsomely carved chairs for the pulpit, and two somewhat smaller ones for the chancel. They are made of black walnut and crimson mohair plush.

A line of shade trees a mile long have been planted on the north side of the Boulevard. The south side and the plots in the middle will next receive attention.

Workmen commenced yesterday to excavate for the new section of sewerage on Union street.

At meetings of the stockholders and board of directors of the Salem Home and Investment Company yesterday the following officers were elected: W. W. Brand, president; W. H. Rutledge, vice-president; L. C. Hansbrough, secretary and treasurer. Board of directors: W. W. Brand, W. T. Younger, L. C. Hansbrough, Charles D. Denit, W. Lee Brand and J. S. Baer.

Irving Long, who left Salem about two weeks ago on a visit to his home in Pennsylvania, will be married to-night in the Lutheran Church at Lykens, Pa., to Miss Stella Hooper, after which Mr. Long and his bride will return to Salem, arriving here Wednesday morning.

Engine No. 214, equipped with the Carper device, was yesterday sent out of the shops at Roanoke to run on the Western division of the Norfolk and Western. Three more are yet to follow. From what can be learned the engines are steaming splendidly, and the officers of the company fully expect the five engines to make as good record as No. 228, whose test was printed.

Miss Stella Stras gave a pleasant birthday party Saturday night to a number of her young friends.

The Right Rev. A. M. Randolph, assistant Bishop of Virginia, will preach here on the 17th of March, and should there be any candidates, will administer the rite of confirmation.

The Monteiro Land Company, within the past few days, sold several lots, on which residences will be built this summer.

Saturday afternoon, whilst walking, to the florists, Miss Florence Birch had the misfortune to lose a handsome gold watch and chain, the property of her sister.

Plans have been submitted to the trustees, Messrs. Towson, Kime and Cumpton, by Architects Nettleton & Demuth, for the proposed new colored school building to be located between Chapman and Water streets. The school-house is to be built this year, of wood, two stories high, containing six rooms, to accommodate 350 pupils.

A Mean Woman.

First Floor-Walker—Talk about meanness! That woman in the black silk is a regular old miser, I'll bet.

Second Floor-Walker—Did she haggle over prices?

First Floor-Walker—No; she selected her things, and paid for 'em fast enough. But during the whole seventeen minutes we've kept her waiting for her change, she hasn't moved around once to look at the other sorts of goods we've got on sale. 'Fraid she'll see something she wants, I s'pose.—Puck.

A Household Remedy.

"Doctor, my son William is not well. He has not got any appetite, and he complains of headache and general debility."

"My dear madam, the best thing is to try a simple household remedy."

"What household remedy do you suggest, doctor?"

"Deprive him of his latch key, so he will be obliged to stay at home after dark."—Texas Siftings.

Advice to a Young Man.

"What do you say to a lady when you are at a ball?" asked a young gentleman who went to a ball for the first time.

"Talk to her about her beauty," replied the friend who had been there before.

"But suppose she hasn't got any?"

"Then talk to her about the ugliness of the other women who are present."

—Texas Siftings.

A WISH REALIZED.

Poet—I do wish something that rhymes with "boat" would strike me!—Puck.

Sanctum Mysteries.

Humorist's Wife—What in the world are you sending all these mother-in-law and plumber jokes to the Daily Blowhard for? They are as old as the hills! Humorist—Yes, my dear; but the editor who selects the humorous matter for that paper is a young fellow just out of college, and they'll be all new to him.—Demorest's Magazine.

A Serious Matter.

"They tell me that young Charley Dudeleigh of the 'Maid of Athens' combination was arrested in Troy last week."

"Yes; it cast a damper on the whole company."

"What was the charge—serious?"

"Yes; impersonating an actor."—Puck.

No Doubt About It.

Professor (lecturing on the gorilla)—Their powers of imitation are strong. When fighting, they use long clubs with deadly effect. How they came to learn these tactics, or—

Student (just back from New York, interrupting)—Maybe they saw a New York policeman.—Judge.

Rather Stale Bread.

Mrs. Slimdick—The boarders are coming in. Cut the bread, Matilda. Miss Slimdick—Ma, I saw in a society paper to-day that bread should be broken, not cut.

Mrs. Slimdick—That's the style now, eh? Very well. Where's the ax?—Chicago Ledger.

Will Be Popular.

Snodgrass—If aerial navigation is ever a success, balloon lines will be the most fashionable means of transportation.

Snively—How do you know? Snodgrass—Because balloons are swell affairs.—Detroit Free Press.

A Smashing Machine.

Hicks—We've got something new at our house—a machine to wash dishes. Wicks—And how does it work?

Hicks—Beautifully. It breaks on an average of five dishes a day. Fact; you would hardly know it from a hired girl.—Boston Transcript.

Life-Long Devotion Assured.

Mrs. Social—And so Miss Flirtie is engaged to your son. Do you think she will be true to him?

Wise Dame—Oh, she'll be true to him as long as other women admire him, and I guess he'll be handsome all his life.—Demorest's Monthly.

About the Size of It.

Gossipy—Good morning, Crosman; what makes you look so glum?

Crosman—Nothing much, only I have a check suit on my hands.

Gossipy—A misfit?

Crosman—Very near it—breach of promise.—Judge.

Only One.

"How many men does it take to make a full company, captain?" asked the visitor to camp.

"One bartender can do it in two hours," returned the captain, absent-mindedly.—Brooklyn Life.

She Appreciated His Condition.

Mrs. Crimmins (at two a. m.)—Is that you, James?

James—Yesh (hic), m' dear.

Mrs. Crimmins—Well, lock the gas and turn out the door and come upstairs.—Judge.

HISTORIC APPOMATTOX.

A Virginian Point of Interest to Every American.

The Old Courthouse Near Which Gen. Lee Surrendered Destroyed by Fire—The McLean Dwelling Saved as by a Miracle.

The destruction by fire of the old courthouse at Appomattox, Va., removes one of the most famous landmarks of the civil war, says the Chicago Graphic. It was here that the army of northern Virginia, under Gen. Lee, made its last stand, and for the timely arrival of couriers from Grant and Lee a destructive battle would have ensued. The confederate forces were moving to their last desperate charge upon a solid line of union infantry in battle array, before whose walls of gleaming bayonets the astonished enemy recoiled in blank dismay, as Sheridan and his troopers, passing quickly around the rebel left, prepared to charge the confused and reeling masses led by Gordon, of Georgia. At this critical moment, as described by Greeley, a white flag was suddenly waved by the enemy before Gen. Custer, who held our cavalry advance, and hostilities were at once suspended. Sheridan rode to the front and was met by Gordon with the announcement that negotiations were then pending between Grant and Lee for a capitulation. Almost simultaneously a union courier arrived with information to the same effect.

This was on the 9th of April, 1865. Grant had been exchanging notes with Lee for several days previous, and the latter, perceiving that the surrender or destruction of his entire force was inevitable, had requested an interview to arrange terms of peace. The two commanders met at the dwelling of Mr. William McLean, near the Appomattox courthouse. The simple conditions of surrender named by Grant were that all commissioned officers should give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the United States, each officer to sign a like parole for the men of his command; the arms, artillery and public property were to be parked and stacked, excepting only the side arms of the officers and their horses and baggage. This done, all officers and privates were allowed to return to their homes, with the assurance they should not be disturbed by the United States government so long as they observed their parole.

The parting of Lee with his devoted followers was a sad one. Of the proud army which, dating its victories from Bull Run, had driven McClellan from before Richmond, and withstood his best efforts at Antietam, and shattered Burnside's host at Fredericksburg, and worsted Hooker at Chancellorsville, and fought Meade so stoutly though unsuccessfully at Gettysburg, and baffled Grant in the Wilderness, at Spotsylvania, on the North Anna, at Cold Harbor and before Petersburg and Richmond, a mere wreck remained. It is said that 27,000 men were included in Lee's capitulation, but of these not more than 10,000 were fit for service. This was all that was left of the 150,000 men reported on the muster rolls a few weeks previous. The resources of the confederacy were exhausted, while those of the loyal states were scarcely touched, and of the million or more borne on our muster rolls probably not more than half were then in active service.

When the transient agony of defeat was passed the confederates crowded around their chief, who with streaming eyes grasped their outstretched hands, at length finding voice to say: "Men, we have fought through the war together. I have done the best I could for you." The union soldiers hastened to divide their rations with their late enemies, to stay their hunger until provisions from our trains could be supplied. Then the confederate soldiers dispersed peacefully to their homes. The McLean dwelling, where the capitulation took place, is still intact. Doubtless an effort will be made by some enterprising speculator to make it a side show like the Libby prison and John Brown's fort, in Chicago, before the opening of the world's fair.

Electricity at a Wedding.

At an electric wedding recently given in Baltimore a series of magic transformations reminded the guests of fairy lore. Floods of incandescent light, glowing in all the rainbow colors, filled the rooms as the bride entered, to the music of the electrical instruments, playing weirdly of themselves, like the far-famed organ of German fairy lore that of its own magic played, when groom and bride were in God's sight well pleasing. Electrical wedding bells rang with no hand touching them. And suddenly, at the feast, the room was plunged into darkness for a moment as the light flashed out from the flowers about the room, in whose hearts blazed tiny electric lamps in globes the tint of the flowers.
